GERMAN ELECTIONS.

They Are Conducted in a Quiet Way, and Nobody Gets Excited. To a German the hurly-burly of an American election is quite incompre-hensible. As the subject of a constitutional government, under which the right of suffrage is general, he thinks he knows a thing or two about the tactics of a political campaign before coming to America. He has, however, every thing to learn about brass bands, torches and oil-cloth uniforms as in-struments of political warfare. When the German Prime Minister appeals to the people for a verdict on his measures a slight ripple of excitement passes over political circles. The newspapers disuss, in an abstract manner, the issues at stake. Correspondents write vague generalities concerning Mr. Schmidt's or Mr. Meyer's ability to carry his district. Careful calculations and thorough canvasses are unknown, or, if known, are not communicated to the newspapers. Campaign committees are not constantly appealing for money. Mutual criminations and recriminations concerning colonization and bribery are never hearl. The German citizen in politics is the German still. He remains the phlegmatic deliberate, conservative student. He wears no badges or buttons before election. Were he to wear a broom or rooster on his hat after election the police would promptly lug him off to

As election day approaches a few quiet meetings are held. The officers linger longer over their coffee in the cafes to tell each other "Bismarck's all right." But they don't say it that way. They say it in sonorous topsy-turvy sentences of classical German words, eight syllables long. In the beer restaurants a Radical tells a Conconservative Bismarck is all wrong. The Conservative demurs. The difference of opinions is drowned in a clatter of mugs and long draughts of beer, and the conversation turns to the latest opera or a prospective bowling party. When German gentlemen do discuss politics with American ardor they not infrequently conclude to settle the mat-ter with pistols. Early in January, 1887, Wilhelm Hillenberg, an East Prussian, heard a man speak of Bis-marck as a rascal, in the Loewenbrau restaurant, Berlin. Mr. Hillenberg was an admirer of Bismarck. He challenged the stranger who thought the Chancelor a rascal to fight with pistols. The duel was fought in the Grunewald, near Berlin. Bismarck's defamer got a bullet in the leg. Bis-of too common occurrence to excite The general and intense suspense which prevails in the United States on election evening has no parallel in Germany. For instance, early in 1887 Germany. For instance, early in 1887 ing the bitter end of disappointment tremendous interests were at stake on the continent. Declaration of war between France and Germany was extractional three process. The continent of the c tween France and Germany was expected daily. In view of France's threatening attitude, Bismarck had appealed to the country to return men to the Reichstag who would vote to in-crease the standing army. Yet on election evening Berliners were little excited. A few more men walked unter den Linden. A few more Lieutenants than usual ogled women from the windows of Cafe Bauer. Oc-

For this book, which that company composed of men of all costs the publisher 50 cents, he gets from nations, termed the diplomatic corps.— Publishers are bound—and this is for the protection of the bookstores—to sell a $1 book for $1. Enough books are sold by them at this price to bring up the average profit, say to 15 cents.

GREENLAND'S PLATEAU.

ome of the Facts Established by Dr Nansen's Experience. Complete details of the remarkable journey which Dr. Nansen and his com-rades made across Greenland last summer will not reach us for several months, as the party arrived at the west coast too late to catch the last vessel. The brief letters, however, from Nansen and Syerdrup that reached Ivigtut just as the last vessel of the season was weighing anchor, give some very noteworthy information which, in nection with the discoveries of son earlier explorers, establishes the fact that inner Greenland is one of the loftiest regions in the world.

Neither of these gentlemen intimates that in their long journey they saw any mountains except near the coast Their travels and previous journeys justify the conclusion that inner Greenland is a vast undulating plateau covered deep with snow and ice. But no plateau of equal tremendous alti-tude is found elsewhere in the world outside of Thibet. For nearly three weeks, they tell us, they traveled at an weeks, they tell us, they traveled at an altitude of over 9,000 feet. As their progress was at the rate of over ten miles a day, they must have journeyed between 150 and 200 miles at an altitude above the sea of nearly 3,000 feet higher than the summit of Mount Washington. No wonder that at that immense height, in about latitude 66 deg. north, they found, even in mid-summer, extremely cold weather and trying winds.

Nordenskiold's two Laps, several hundred miles north of Nansen's route, attained an elevation of 7,000 feet, at a distance of 140 miles from the west coast. Mr. Peary, at 100 miles from the west coast, reached a height of 8,000 feet. Dr. Hayes, 900 miles north of Nansen's route, pushed inland sixty miles, where he was 4,500 feet above the sea, and saw the plateau stretching away before him, 500 feet higher than the tallest of the Catskill mountains. It is these inland elevations, gradually sloping to the coasts, that, by the force of gravitation, push the ice-cap toward the sea and make Green-land the greatest of Northern iceberg manufactories.

Such facts as these are well worthy the adventuresome and difficult journeys required to obtain them. But the secrets of inner Greenland are not yet fathomed, and it remains for future explorers to tell us whether Greenland is an immense island or really an archian immense island of ready an archi-pelago, as a few authorities are inclined to believe. It is to be hoped that Dr. Nausen will be able to tell us much about the great sea of ice that deeply covers the region he traversed.—N. Y.

THE PERSIAN MINISTER.

The Picture of the Shah's Representative at Washington.

The Persian Minister, Hadji Hassein Ghouly Kahn, is now well settled at Washington. When a reporter of that himself opened the door. "I am ze Minister," he said in answer to an inquiry. He is below the medium height, and has a keen, pleasant face and sparkling black eyes. His black har is sprinkled with white upon the temples, and on the top of his head he unter den Linden. Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly For

An admirable historical and anec dotal article, with illustrations, on Washington's Inauguration, leads off the April number of Frank Leslie' Popular Monthly. It cannot fail to be in general demand at this centennial period, when President Harrison is preparing to join the commenorative celebration by traveling to New York over the same route taken by our first President one hundred years ago Another seasonable article is Ensign Wilkinson's account of "Samoa, and the Trouble there." Dion Boucicault, in his contribution entitled "Going on the Stage," gives a charming gossipy account of the work of training young actors and actresses at Mr. Palmer's Madison Square School of Acting, of which the veteran author actor is the head. The illustrations for this article are drawn by Mr. Matt Morgan. Outing and travel are represented by"A Fortnight in Seville, "and "A Virginia Journey," from Jefferson's Rock (Harper's Ferry to Monticello, by Henry Tyrroll; also by Professor D P. Todd's scientific account of "An American Eclipse Expedition in the Louisville Friday. Kuhn's Jeans miles north of town, got the piano. Orient. "Elizabeth Sharp's characterization of "Dinah Muloch Mrs. Craik)"deserves an appreciative read ing. The serial and short stories literary essays, poems, biographical and natural history sketches, humorous verse and, above all, the art illustrations, are profuse and varied, more than sustaining the great reputation of the Popular Monthly

EARLY ENGLISH MELODY. The earliest specimens of English National melody we believe to be found in the now well-known madrigal "Summer is a coming in," which dates about 1250. One of its earliest arungements was as a six-part song for en, but it is now generally accepte that this was formed on an original national song, "selected according to the custom of the time as a basis for harmony." Its character is purely It gives elaborate discriptions of the pastoral, suggestive of shepherds' latest spring fashions, illustrated by a pipes and birds' notes, that there is a which indeed is only to be expected, it province to deal with the harpers and minstrels who preceded and followed art has come down to us, and the es tablishment of printing in England was the signal for their decadence People ceased to care to listen to their long yarns when they could buy the little printed collections of songs called "Garlands" for themselves. Suffice it to say that in those early days the position of minstrel was a very prominent and important one; no great house was without its minstrel band, whose payment was far in advance of that of the ordinary clergy. In the fourteenth century music seems to have been almost or grant of the control of the contr most as general as it is at present: the instruments used were the "harp, psaltery, rebec, fiddle, bagpipe. flute, tern." flute, trumpet, rote, and git-tern." Abundant passages can be found in the works of Chaucer (from which both Burney and Chappell have largely drawn), showing that all his most important characters were credited with some skill in music, and thus testifying to the fashion of the day. The minstrel's dress, we are told in a later account, was a long gown of Kendal green; "after three lowly courtesies he cleared his voice with a nem-wiped his lips with the hollow of his hand, tempered a string or two with his wrist, and, after a little warbling on his harp for prelude, came forth with a solemn song." We also know that the minstrels "flourished exceedingly," indeed, too much so; for toward the end of Elizabeth's reign, when their decline was already far advanced, so many dishonest persons had adopted the calling that an act of Par liament was obliged to be passed de ciding that minstrels wandering abroad "were rogues, vagabonds and sturdy beggars, to be punished as such."— is vastly more powerful than gun-powder, but thus far they have played little or no part in war. However, the knowledge which has been gained of their properties had the the sidewalks and in the great "dumb-bell" tenements, in the rickety old frame buildings, in the damp, unwholesome cellars, on the sidewalks and in the great reskprogress which has been made in applying them, especially as charges for shell, lead to the belief that they will the sidewalks and in the gutters reeking with filth and garbage, is a seething mass of humanity, so ignorant, so vicious, so deprayed that they hardly be used with great effect in future wars and will cause a revolution in the pre-vailing systems of fortifications and methods of warfare. THE MULBERRY BEND. Den Picture of One of New York City's Most Repulsive Spots. Within a stone's throw of the City Hall, and the offices of the great news-papers, midway between two of the pusiest thoroughfares of this busiest city of the new world, is an eddy in the life of the city where the scurr collects, where the very offscourings of all humanity seem to find lodgment. In the great "dumb-bell" tenements, the sidewalks and in the gutters reekvicious, so depraved that they hardly seem to belong to our species. Men and women, yet living, not like animals, but like vermin! Livery door and alley-way is a sewer from which pour invisible rivers of foul gases, pestilential odors and germs of disease. Villianous-looking men lounge is born of a sense of evil-doing; blackeyed women, some of them scarcely past the age of girlhood, and others as wrinkled, ugly and repulsive-looking nursing their babes and earning a scanty livelihood by retailing stale bread at two and three cents a loaf. thieves of every nationality. Hulking youths lounge around the entrances to the liquor-shops, the last successors of that all-powerful "gang" which took its name from its warning cry of and revolver ready, alert for the stilletto or slung-shot, which is bound to come to him sooner or later if he re-mains on the post and does his duty.

The Bend is not a pleasant neighborhood by day, in the dim sunlight which straggles down between the tall tenements and renders visible the sidewalks reeking with filth, the gutters choked with decaying garbage and animal matter, and the wretches who are compeled to live here and who cost and increased the available supply make the place what it is. -Allan Forman, in American Magazine.

methods of many, so called, grade schools.

To know from memory is good, but to be able to know by thought is better. Pupils are uncouraged to the exercise of all their better powers.

The faculty will remain, as it has been for a year past except the place of Prof. Dabney will be supplemented by PROP. FLEMING.

It will be seen, therefore, that the faculty consists of the same number of professors and teachers and that all the advantages usually offered are still to be obtained as any former session. Young men may beard at any

IN THROUGH COACH.

These Coaches have Porters in charge to look after the Comfort and welfare of the Smigrant, and to see that the Local Passengers are not allowed to get in the Through Coachand crowd them. No other route offers such inducements. It would tax your time and patience too much to attempt to describe the rich and beautiful homes and fertile lands of Arkansas and Texas. Therefore, I would advise you to go and see for yourself. Examine the country. Mingle with the people. Learn the advantages and disadvantages. Examine the school facilities. Buy orrent a farm, or take up Government Land, and go to work.

And go to work.

And go to work.

And go to work.

Our medital promites Southeast cannot endure the extreme cold of Kansas, Nebraska and the Northwestern winter. Just think of it—nine long months of ice, snow and bitter winds in exchange for our Sunny South.

Our well-timbered land for their treeless tracts! Yet there are unscrupulous agents who give glowing discriptions of the Northwest. Do not be deceived! Visit Arkansas and Texas and be your own judge!
